Here are some of the key highlights from the launch event with EA Sports executive producer Dave Rutter: PLAYERS SHOW WHAT YOU CAN DO WITH THE TECHNOLOGY • New throw-ins that are created based on the actions of the player, displayed in the new player camera. This lets you see your throw-in options in real time. • New pass completion animations which carry a true feeling of how these passes could finish. • A new dribble animation lets you see your potential move, without needing to finish it first. • Real-life player movements are displayed in the player cam, letting you see exactly what he's doing on the pitch. • Standard passing animations are complemented with the new player movements, letting you see how the play would unfold if your pass was received correctly. • New "smooth" pass animations give you a clearer look at the pass as it lands in the forward player's feet. • Passes that land into new spaces are no longer performed with a fake shoot animation. Instead, a photo-realistic shot is performed which makes it feel more natural. • And for the first time ever, you'll be able to view the entire pitch from the player's perspective, inside your stadium in Fifa 22 Crack. You can play FIFA 22 and use the most comprehensive suite of engine-powered and game-changing features (including "FIFA Personal Kicks"). TEAM PERFORMANCE INDICATORS AS PLAYER SELECTORS: All 22 players of your squad can now be selected via your preferred performance indicators – the more you perform in a specific situation the more likely your players will perform well in those particular moments. Systematic Transfer Evaluation (STE): STE allows you to identify and build a team that suits your requirements. Set your preferred performance indicators and players now appear in your matches based on their individual performance. Inevitable Tactical Decision (IDTD): Players now react to the situations you call for, as soon as you enter them. All play styles – attacking, defending or in the middle – are now represented in this new selection system. Through the match, players can evolve based on their performance, which in turn will influence the whole team's performance and
