* Slideshows. Slideshow programs are generally used to deliver a presentation in the form of a series of individual images. You can make a slideshow with effects like image masks and perspective transforms, or use a button that adds audio, narration, music, and so on. Some slideshow programs allow you to set transitions between slides, so that the presentation flows naturally from one slide to the next. * Customizing background images. Web designers usually use Photoshop or Photoshop Elements to create background images for their websites. If you're new to Photoshop or have never worked in web design, you might find it a little daunting to start. Luckily, there are plenty of tutorials available online that teach you everything you need to know about creating such images. Several Photoshop books written for intermediate to advanced users have sections devoted to web design, such as _Photoshop_ _for Web Design_ (Avery) and _Web Design Workflows with Adobe Photoshop CS6_ (Meyerowitz). * Multimedia editing. Whether you're working on video, music, or interactive design, Photoshop is a popular solution. It's designed for editing still images, but the program also has tools for capturing and editing video and audio. A growing number of professionals use Photoshop's bitmap editing capabilities to create digital art. Although Photoshop can't compete with dedicated art programs such as Art Rage (www.artrage.com) or Photoshop Art Factory (www.aitographics.com), it's still a really useful tool for concept, design, illustration, and painting.

the target site of the miRNA, the larger the number of reads that map to the target, and the lower the software probability score. When we analysed the reads that could be mapped to the target sites of the miRNAs, we observed that a few were present at a threshold of more than 50 reads, and the total number of reads was much less than 500. These included miR-1*4*5p* (57 reads) and miR-1*3p* (47 reads) in ISL11 miRNAs, miR-133a* (303 reads) and miR-133b* (145 reads) in the cardiac muscle samples, and miR-133a* (94 reads) and miR-133b* (103 reads) in the HT-1 cell line. In all of the above cases, the target scores were 0.90 or higher, meaning that these reads should be predicted to be relatively degraded products of the small non-coding RNAs by using the software BLAST2 software. In the case of the miR-133* family, which contains the same mature sequence with the exception of a single nucleotide base at position 10 (Fig. 1{ref-type="fig"}), there was some variation between the miRNAs. We also observed that the target sites for each miRNA were not completely conserved, even in the case of the same mature miRNA. This finding suggested that both miR-133a* and miR-133b* could have functions other than post-transcriptional regulation of their mRNA targets. The expression levels of miR-133a* and miR-133b* in human tissues and cell lines have been reported to be relatively high in skeletal muscle, heart and the testis ([@bib4]; [@bib11]; [@bib14]; [@bib15]; [@bib2]). However, some previous reports have demonstrated the expression of miR-133* in neurogenesis and the central nervous system ([@bib20]; [@bib16]; [@bib9]). In this study, we did not perform Northern blot analysis to confirm the levels of expression in the brain. We
